TYSON FOODS ADDRESSES CAGNY

NAPLES, Fla. (February 21) - Tyson Foods, Inc. (NYSE: TSN) said today its growth strategies in chicken are threefold: organizing around key customers, moving products up the value chain and building on brand strengths, according to Greg Lee, the Company's chief operating officer, at the annual Consumer Analyst Group of New York (CAGNY) conference.

Tyson said it expects to generate approximately $35 million in savings in fiscal 2001 due to supply chain initiatives which have helped to streamline and leverage purchasing practices to ensure lower input costs on packaging, ingredients and equipment without sacrificing quality.

"While $35 million is substantial, our expectations are to be annualizing at the rate of $100 million by year-end. Our attention to capital expenditures has ensured that we are spending our money most efficiently on necessary repairs and maintenance, while improving our capital project mix to include greater investment in cost reduction and income-producing projects," Lee added.

Speaking about the difficult environment in the poultry industry, Lee said the key strategies for Tyson have been to cut back bird supply, to internalize raw materials and to grow sales and market share. While the cutback in bird supply had the effect of reducing commodity sales, Tyson has had continued growth in sales and market share in core categories.

"In fact, our demand has risen to the point that we now have to selectively add a few more birds back into the system to service our business. This will provide us the ability to lower costs without upsetting the balance of supply and to service growing demand for specific bird sizes," Lee added.

Looking ahead, Lee said he expects the convenience-food category to continue to grow substantially as more people enter the job market and have less time to prepare meals. Within the next nine years, of the estimated incremental $123 billion growth in food spending, foodservice establishments are projected to capture more than 60 percent or $76 billion, while the retail market will capture about $47 billion in growth. Chicken continues to gain a greater share of the foodservice menu with chicken items being added faster than other meat-based items, according to Lee.

"We continue to grow the chicken category in foodservice through product innovations. For example, we rolled out new products in the first quarter to capitalize on the popularity of handheld appetizers. Chicken now represents about 25 percent of total appetizers served," Lee said.

John Lea, chief marketing officer, spoke to the growth and strength of the Tyson brand. He noted significant increases in consumer brand awareness and the brand perceptions of quality, safety and trust. In describing the Company's brand building strategies, he highlighted Tyson's $10 million partnership with and support of Share our Strength, an international hunger relief organization, and Tyson's environmental recognition and awards program.

Lea said, "We are clearly being rewarded for our efforts and are very proud that Fortune magazine recently ranked Tyson as number two among America's Most Admired Companies in the food processing category."

Steve Hankins, chief financial officer, said the Company's sales had grown at a compound annual growth rate of 5.4 percent over the past five years. While 2000 earnings were at a lower level than the previous year, Tyson's cash flow increased by more than $40 million due to a renewed emphasis on the cash cycle and less spending on capital projects, according to Hankins.

Commenting on the Company's pending acquisition of IBP, inc. (NYSE: IBP), John Tyson, chairman, president and CEO, said, "Thinking about the two companies together, you have industry leadership in beef, chicken and pork, with the combined market share of those three proteins at close to 25 percent. Our strengths in branding, customer relationships and partnerships and our focus on value added products and growing demand in retail and foodservice will combine nicely with IBP. We will truly have a company that is unique in market and product reach and strong in its capabilities to generate cash to pay down debt."
