Re: CEO Appointment

Dear Sirs and Madam:

As shareholders we are perplexed and disturbed by the events described in the Company's Form 8-K filed on Friday.

Giving the Board the benefit of the doubt, we can understand how it would be possible to overlook the unambiguous requirement in the Company's Certificate of Incorporation that the Series A designee on the Board approve the appointment of an insider as the Chief Executive Officer pursuant to a lucrative Engagement Agreement. However, we cannot understand (or abide) the Board's failure to immediately cancel this ultra vires transaction once it had become clear that Mr. Cohen had exercised his right to block the Engagement Agreement.

Let there be no mistake. The putative appointment of Mark Ettenger pursuant to the Engagement Agreement is clearly a "transaction" which includes any exchange of funds for services (see, e.g., Investopedia). As a current director, Mr. Ettenger is without question an "insider" as defined in the Certificate of Incorporation. Nor is it remotely acceptable to suggest that this is a "done deal" because the Company is already bound by the signed Engagement Agreement. Mr. Ettenger is a fiduciary of the Company bound to reasonably cooperate with any action necessary to allow the Company to comply with its organizational documents. Nor can it credibly be argued that the appointment of a sitting director as CEO pursuant to an engagement agreement (which doubles the prior CEO's base salary and adds a new incentive-based component) is not a matter for the Series A director's review – the provision was obviously intended to place a limit on payments to insiders out of Company assets. Clearly then, Mr. Ettenger is obligated to permit the Company to immediately rescind the invalidly approved Engagement Agreement. And the other directors, particularly Alan Miller as the independent director, should work toward that result.

The Board of Directors of Trinity Place Holdings, Inc.

Given that this controversy was not resolved prior to the filing of the 8-K (a filing which can only be viewed as an embarrassment), we are compelled to the conclusion that a majority of the Board intends to try to proceed with the engagement over Mr. Cohen's objection. This would be a reckless course with potentially serious consequences. Any action taken by Mr. Ettenger as CEO without Board approval could be called into question and individual Board members could be held responsible for their outcome. The Board's judgment and fidelity to their obligations might well be challenged. There is simply no justification for such corporate governance failures.

We urge the Board to reverse course and rescind the Engagement Agreement and the CEO appointment. We expect a prompt response, if not to us then publicly to all Shareholders.

Very truly yours,
