The selling party is Volvere Plc. an investing company, which held the shares of Vectra since May 2003. The transaction is conditional upon approval from Volvere shareholders and is likely to be completed within the next three weeks. It is expected that the acquisition will be immediately accretive to earnings per share. No further financial details were disclosed.

Vectra strengthens our position in the U.K. environmental market and complements our client list with an additional number of large multinational firms , says Michiel Jaski, member of the Executive Board of ARCADIS. The acquisition of Vectra meets our objective to broaden the portfolio of environmental consultancy services for our multinational clients, At the same time we can offer our extensive range of services to Vectra s clients, so there is ample opportunity to create additional growth through synergies.

This transaction comes at exactly the right time for Vectra. Within Volvere we strengthened our services offering and focused on specific activities with good growth potential. Now, as part of ARCADIS, we expect to speed up growth and further increase our margins. says John Field, director of the Process division of Vectra. In addition, we see solid synergy opportunities on the basis of ARCADIS know-how and experience in the environmental field and expect to benefit from the strong relationships ARCADIS has with multinational customers .
