Thanks for joining the all-hands call to hear more about Verizon's intention to acquire Fleetmatics. As a follow up, I'm sharing the communication Verizon Telematics CEO Andrés Irlando shared with Verizon Telematics employees regarding this news. It is important to note that our intent is to provide as much transparency as possible during the next few months. To that end, my email to Fleetmatics employees will also be sent to the Verizon Telematics employees.

From: Andrés Irlando

Subject: Another Bold Step Toward Our Winning Aspiration

It was just six weeks ago when we announced our bold move to purchase Telogis as the next step in our strategy and goal to become the global leader in telematics as well as fleet and mobile enterprise management. As I shared on Friday, that deal officially has closed and we are now one company, one team. We've begun the exciting and challenging work of integrating our two companies, and we're more confident than ever that the combination of Telogis' and Verizon Telematics' assets and talented teams brings us one step closer to our ultimate goal.

And yet even after our merger with Telogis, the fleet and mobile workforce management opportunity globally remains large, fragmented, and underpenetrated. For those reasons, I'm excited to share with you today that, moments ago we announced Verizon's offer to acquire Fleetmatics, a leading global provider of SaaS-based fleet and mobile workforce solutions for service-based businesses of all sizes, headquartered in Dublin, Ireland, with North American headquarters in Waltham, Massachusetts and additional offices in the US and across the globe.

As you can tell, we're moving very quickly externally to complement and help realize our strategy after spending the last 18-months transforming Verizon Telematics internally. The acquisition of Telogis and offer to acquire Fleetmatics have been carefully considered. We're confident these moves will deliver best-in-class results and opportunities for our customers, employees and shareholders. When Verizon and Telogis are combined with Fleetmatics, the result will be a leading provider of fleet and mobile workforce management solutions globally.

Ultimately, the combination of these three businesses would make something much greater than the sum of its parts - enhancing greatly our existing products and service offerings, accelerating our growth and innovation, expanding our geographic footprint, furthering our international ambitions, advancing our ability to gain market share and acquire market-leading capabilities through our products and technology, and blending the best teams and talent in the industry.

It's important to remember, again, that while the offer for Fleetmatics has been announced, it has not yet closed and likely won't until the fourth quarter. As you're aware from our experience with the Telogis deal, this is a critical time and there are antitrust legal restrictions that limit disclosure of information to protect each company. For this reason, please do not reach out to Fleetmatics. Also, unlike the Telogis deal, the Fleetmatics deal is subject to SEC regulation and strict Irish takeover laws, so it's even more important than ever that we stick to what we know and not make anything up about this transaction or our potential future state. In fact, unless otherwise authorized, you should not talk about this deal externally.

I want to reiterate what I stated in June and again on Friday: It is essential that we all stay focused over the coming weeks and months. There is much work to do around the integration planning of the companies, and at the same time, we must ensure that we continue to meet our current financial and operational objectives. Our customers remain dependent on us to serve them every day. We can't let this exciting news distract us from executing flawlessly or achieving our standard of excellence.

Please join me and my direct leadership team this afternoon at 4:30p ET/1:30p PT/8:30a NZT for an all-hands call. You can also listen with local leaders in select locations (details to follow). I will offer more details and share a bit more about Fleetmatics, the opportunities between us, and what's to come in the months ahead. As was the case with Telogis, we're committed to providing you as much information as we can, as soon as we can. For that reason, we're building a microsite that will serve as the single source of truth about each of the three companies and provide a place for accurate, up-to-date information. In the meantime, please continue to use Chatter for Verizon Telematics. We'll be launching Chatter for our Telogis colleagues as well, expanding the conversation and ensuring everyone has the information they need. Telogis employees will learn more about that this week. Finally, Verizon Telematics and Telogis leaders will also be onsite in our various locations this week to answer questions.

Subject: Another Bold Step Toward Our Winning Aspiration

While we each make our own unique contributions to the business, we are motivated by a shared ambition: to make a difference in the world by becoming the most impactful telematics/mobile enterprise management/mobile workforce management company in the world. We are one step closer on our journey of achieving that goal. For that reason, I want to again offer my heartfelt thanks to each of you for your individual and collective contributions. This is another win for our companies and one that holds tremendous promise for the future.

Yours,

Andrés
