Bank says XM+Sirius merger will happen

Rapid TV News

Shares in Sirius Satellite Radio and rival XM jumped last week on the back of a positive report from investment bankers Cowen & Co's senior analyst Thomas Watts saying it looks likely that their planned merger would win Department of Justice (DoJ) approval.

In fact anyone buying into XM back in the summer, when the company's share price was in the $11-$12 range, would have seen a beneficial return on their investment with the price in the $14.80 region on Friday.

Much the same applies to Sirius, at $2.90 this past summer and now at $3.50. Market sentiment was also helped last week when a former Federal Communications Commission (FCC) chairman, Mark Fowler, said the two operators should be allowed to merge. If the two satellite radio companies, each only several years old, need to combine to be more effective competitors in an audio entertainment marketplace teeming with technological change and innovation, the government should not stand in the way, said Fowler.

The positive view is being taken because if the DoJ gives a go-ahead, then it is a given that the FCC is likely to follow with a similar decision. The market expectation is that a decision will be made within the next 30-60 days. (c) Rapid TV News 2007

Karmazin Underscores Consumer Choice Plans

Jeffrey Yorke

Radio and Records

September 18, 2007

To hear Sirius Satellite Radio CEO Mel Karmazin (pictured) tell it, a merger between his company and competitor XM Satellite Radio will produce hundreds of millions of dollars in savings based on the findings of a third party contractor that, for antitrust reasons, according to Karmazin, has been hired by the two companies to review each company's private papers and determine where duplication of costs can be saved in new synergies.

Karmazin told the Merrill Lynch Media and Entertainment Global Investor Conference in Marina del Rey, Calif., Monday morning (Sept. 17) that a merger between Sirius and XM will mean more choices and better prices. Karmazin emphasized that once the proposed $13.6 billion merger is cleared by federal regulators which he hopes is by year's end consumers will have their choice of more, lower-priced packages after the merger that will generate more subscribers and more revenue. He also noted that sports fans will not only have more choices, but will be able to get NFL football and Major League Baseball on the same radio. He added, "A la carte pricing lets the consumer decide how much will be spent on radio."

Karmazin seemed a bit peeved that the $13.6 billion satellite merger proposal had attracted four congressional hearings earlier this year while no Congressional hearings have been conducted for the proposed $80 billion Bell South-AT&T merger.

Karmazin told analysts that advertising revenue for Sirius is about 4% to 5% of our overall revenues. I'd like to see that get up to 10% of our revenues. Karmazin noted that Sirius programmers will not add advertising to the company's popular spot-free music channels because that is the lure from terrestrial that has the satcaster gaining subscribers every quarter. Karmazin said Sirius claimed 75% of the new satellite subscribers last quarter and expects to end 2007 with more than 8 million. Karmazin said most consumers are so unhappy with the amount of commercials on terrestrial radio that it is a driver to satellite radio. Putting commercials on music channels will disadvantage us, so we are committed to not putting commercials on our music channels," he said.

He reported that only 3.7% of the market is subscribing to satellite radio. The way we are going to grow our business is to grow the subscriber base and cut our subscriber acquisition costs. He expects to reduce the SAC to less than $100 by year's end. Sirius has enjoyed dual streams of revenues with advertising and subscriber's monthly fees. Sirius had free cash flow in the fourth quarter of 2007 and Karmazin says it remains on that path today.

Karmazin said Sirius was the fifth fastest-growing radio company during the first half of 2007 with $431 million in revenue, with pro forma growth of 55.5%. Clear Channel topped winners with $1.7 billion in revenues, with pro forma growth at 2%; CBS had $861 million in revenues with a growth loss of 4.5%; XM had $541 million with 24.2% growth; Citadel, $465 million, minus 2.4%; Sirius; then Entercom with $225 million and flat growth; Cox Radio, $219 million, 1.9% growth; Univision Radio, $204 million, 15.4% growth; Radio One, $163 million, -3% growth; Cumulus, $160 million, 0.3% growth; and Emmis Radio, $122 million, with growth off by 5.8%.

Karmazin said Sirius has launched its Backseat TV service with three live video channels being sent to a car antenna the size of a hockey puck and that receivers in new cars are being included in Chryslers rolling off the assembly line right now. Aftermarket units will be available shortly.

NAB and terrestrial broadcasters have been battling SoundExchange over the rate they would be paying for streaming music on the Internet and paying a new fee for songs broadcast over the air. Karmazin, always ready to enjoy a poke at the NAB, noted how satellite broadcasters pay royalty fees to ASCAP, BMI and SoundExchange. Our feeling is that we compete with terrestrial radio and they ought to pay SoundExchange to air recordings.

Asked if Sirius would renegotiate new, less expensive air-rights deals with the NFL, NASCAR and other sports networks, Karmazin said the satcaster would honor all of the current contracts and that he does not believe that the current deals are expensive, considering the number of subscribers they attract to Sirius.

Karmazin: XM-Sirius Merger Good For The Country

Radio Ink

September 18, 2007

LOS ANGELES September 18, 2007: Sirius Satellite Radio CEO Mel Karmazin accentuated the positive in an early-morning presentation at the Merrill Lynch Media & Entertainment Conference at the Ritz Carlton in Marina del Rey Monday, pointing to Sirius' revenue growth, its consumer-satisfaction rates, and its free-cash-flow prospects and, of course, its proposed merger with XM Satellite Radio, which he hopes will be completed by the end of this year. Karmazin began by pointing out, "We compete with terrestrial radio, Apple iPods we know we're part of a robust audio entertainment market.

After running through a brief company timeline, beginning with its 1990 launch as CD Radio, Karmazin said, "For those of you who have not yet decided that it's worth paying for radio, our customer-satisfaction level is over 92 percent.

Karmazin went on to describe Sirius' OEM automaker partners including DaimlerChrysler and Mercedes Benz as "very committed and very enthusiastic about being involved with our company." He said, "They think we help them sell cars." He noted that, in 2005, the company's OEM partners were installing Sirius in 10 percent of their new vehicles and that, this year, the figure has risen to 40 percent.

Moving on to revenue growth, Karmazin emphasized Sirius' place in the competitive arena, saying, "We compete with the Clear Channels and CBS's of the world, and ... we are the fifth-largest radio-revenue company today." He went on, "There is a radio-revenue company out there that has humongous growth rates, and it's us.

Karmazin did admit, "One of the issues for us is that we don't have any cash flow but said subscriber-acquisition costs are dropping significantly, down from about $177 per acquisition to about $100. He noted that Sirius said after adding Howard Stern two years ago that its content was complete, and added, "There is no more expensive content out there that our company needs ... Now what we're focused on is generating all of that revenue so that we get over the hurdle of those high, fast costs.

Moving on to address the merger directly, Karmazin briefly described the DOJ criteria for merger approval and said,

"We don't feel that the government should feel the merger is anticompetitive. The efficiencies to be gained by a merged Sirius and XM, he said, would lead to lower costs to consumers, and that's good for the country.

Karmazin said, "Over the next few months, we expect to get, and we are optimistic that we will get, FCC approval, we will get DOJ approval, we will have a shareholder meeting and get our shareholder vote, and we hope that the merger will close by year's end.

Describing the merger's expected benefits, Karmazin noted the a la carte packages, starting at $6.99 a month, the combined satcasters plan to offer, saying the added subscribers the lower prices will draw will represent a new revenue opportunity.

Additionally, he said, the merger will accelerate technological innovation to let XM-Sirius better compete in a very robust entertainment market, especially against terrestrial radio, and will provide extraordinary cost synergies of between $3 billion and $7 billion that will both benefit shareholders and be passed along to consumers in the form of lower prices.

For Immediate Release

The Tennessee Conservative Union Declares Support for SIRIUS
Satellite Radio and XM Satellite Radio Merger

Knoxville, TN -The Tennessee Conservative Union, the state's oldest and largest conservative organization with more than 15,000 members statewide, has declared its support for the merger of SIRIUS Satellite Radio and XM Satellite Radio.

TCU Chairman Lloyd C. Daugherty cited three reasons for support of the merger:

Competition makes everybody and everything better. New technology and a new approach should not be denied to the market, he said.

Secondly, this merger provides more programming and more choices for the consumer. Daugherty continued, "We are a nation that cherishes a diversity of choices. A merger between SIRIUS and XM would be a remarkable step forward to achieve just that."

The Tennessee Conservative Union also believes that a SIRIUS-XM merger would cause traditional radio stations to focus on local programming. The trend of the last decade for large corporate radio companies to purchase local stations, to dismiss homegrown talent and local employees and then simply switch on syndicated programming has not been healthy for the industry or for the community, Daugherty said. "The merger between SIRIUS and XM will make all radio better."

Radio is America's town hall. Daugherty said "It's where we meet, talk and share the culture. This merger will create an even more effective venue for America's local and national town hall."

The TCU is calling on the Tennessee Congressional Delegation to do what's right for the consumer, local radio and to be consistent with America's free enterprise philosophy and support the merger between SIRIUS Satellite Radio and XM Satellite Radio.
