Questions Submitted by Lam Employees, Posted October 30, 2015

TOPIC: Employees

I was wondering if the plan in the near or distant future with the merger is to have all of KLA Tencor's people moved from their current Milpitas campus over to the Fremont Lam Campus?

Fremont will continue as our headquarters and we will prioritize facilities actions to pursue proximity value. Both campuses are densely occupied, and so, unlike Novellus, we do not expect campus wide consolidation. Particularly with the new lab, we will look for opportunities to co-locate Lam and KLA-Tencor employees to accelerate our vision.

TOPIC: Employees

With an initial combined forecast of ~12K+ Headcount, what do you foresee as the end-game on Headcount?

We are taking this action for strategic reasons and for growth. It's too soon to speculate on headcount, but looking long-term, we believe this combination will create new opportunities for individual growth in the company. The combined company's resources and capabilities will allow us to further invest in and develop employees around the globe.

During the pre-close integration phase, we will create a small but dedicated team to understand the company structure choices to best position for long term growth. We will be working on a comprehensive integration plan, and will share more details as soon as possible.

TOPIC: Transaction

Do we expect AMAT to make a competing offer for KLA? If so, what's our plan to deal with that? Is there any kind of poison pill set up to incentivize KLA board/shareholders to stick with our offer?

We cannot speculate on what other companies may or may not do. The merger agreement contains provisions that contemplate the possibility of other proposals. In certain circumstances described in the merger agreement these provisions could result in the payment of termination fees provided in the merger agreement.
